SMALL FIRE AT HENRY AFONG'S

The careless use of matches by two children resulted in the partial destruction of a barn, wash-house and servant's quarters attached to Henry Afong's premises at the corner of Alexander and Beretania streets shortly after noon today. Afong's young son and another little boy named Friele, were playing with matches in the barn, in which a quantity of hay was stored and by some mischance the hay caught fire. The children ran out of the barn, but before the alarm was conveyed to the brigade headquarters the barn was well alight, and the fire had spread to the wash-house and servants' quarters.

The alarm was given at 12:20, and in less than half an hour the three buildings referred to were practically gutted. Fortunately the brigade was able to prevent the flames from reaching the dwelling proper.

During the progress of the fire one of the Chinese servants was almost distracted by the thought that all his hard-earned savings were being burnt up. In his room he had a sum of money in a purse as well as his clothes,

The Hawaiian Electric Co., Ltd.
Honolulu, T. H.
Gentlemen:—
For nearly two months the one hundred horse power Westinghouse motor which you furnished this Company has been working at our rock crushing plant at Pahoa. It is giving entire satisfaction and our only regret is that we did not install it long ago. We are able now to deliver more crushed rock and sand than ever before and at lower prices.
It is cheaper, being more efficient, always ready for work, no break down, no lost time and no parts to wear out as in our previous plant where gasoline engines were used.
Sincerely Yours,
HUSTACE-PECK CO., LTD.
FRANK HUSTACE, Manager.

etc. But it was the money he worried about. Approaching one of the police officers there he besought him to have the streams of water directed on that portion of the building that contained his hoard. "How fashion?" he cried. "No can catchee money; all loosee. Too muchee money have got that side, no can loosee. Masked clothes, must catchee money."
Fortunately for this servant, Chuck Hing by name, the fire was put out before that part of the building was entirely consumed, and as soon as the flames were extinguished, but while the charred beams were still smoking, Chuck Hing rushed in, seized his purse and sat on the grass gleefully counting his money, and for the moment paying no heed to the fact that he had lost everything else.
The damage by the fire is estimated roughly at $400.

TRAGEDY RELATED

cred until ten o'clock in the conduct of the search. I heard no cries for help. We must have left the vicinity at about ten-thirty, and then we shaped a course for Honolulu.

Saw Light Disappear.
"I conversed with Lieut. Sahm about the matter, and we concluded that nothing had happened to the schooner, as we had heard no cries, and saw no signals of distress. Lieut. Sahm did not issue direct orders to return to Honolulu. Had I insisted upon staying there, he would have granted me permission to do so. To the best of my judgment I did all I could. We saw the green light disappear and we thought that the schooner was hardly hurt and that she had sailed away.
"The green light bore away towards the south pretty rapidly. Both Lieut. Sahm and I were quite satisfied that the vessel did not need any assistance."

Captain Mana.
Captain Sam Mana the master of the Mol Wahine, said that he was in charge when she collided with the Kukul. The sails were all drawing. "I first sighted the lights on the Kukul some time after eight," he said. "I was at the wheel. I saw the mast-head light first. As soon I saw that light I kept one point outside, so that I would make her clear. I cannot recollect long it was afterwards before I saw the port lights of the Kukul, but not the starboard light. When the vessels headed towards me I saw both the side lights. I saw headed S. E. by E.
"When the Kukul approached I took another course. At that particular time I was quite a distance from Molokai—probably between seven and eight miles. The Kukul approached me and put me in a very critical position, so I headed towards Lannai. I think the Kukul must have been twenty miles off when I first saw her light.
Struck Head On.
"When we struck the Kukul we went back, and never went ahead. We struck head on. My schooner did not stop long. I was at the wheel. When I saw the lights of the Kukul I put a boy out to watch them. I had side lights on the Mol Wahine. I had a white light aft as well. The man lighted his lamps at six o'clock. The crew stood watches. When I go to bed I leave a Korean in charge. One particular member of the crew was always left in charge. It was not customary for everyone to go to sleep except the man on watch. No; I do not carry a mate. A man always patrolled the deck to look after the lights. I sleep very little myself, and am always looking around. Moreover, I can always see when the lights are burning by the reflection of the jib and the flying jib.

"The Mol Wahine foundered within two or three minutes of the collision. Had she floated longer, I would have been able to get out the boats. I could not see what damage was done. The sidelight was first struck and knocked into the water, then that part of the fore-rigging was smashed into. Two boats were lashed in position on deck. The boy did not have a knife with which to cut the lashing. There were some lifebuoys on board, but there were plenty of pieces of wood that should have been capable of floating people. I believe that the whole crew was drowned. When we saw the vessel sinking bow first we all jumped into the water.
Crew in Water.
"I saw some of the crew in the water. I told them there was no hurry and to go easy. The Kukul was close to us and everybody hollered. She never came back.
"When the Mol Wahine left Honolulu she had a pretty high freeboard—probably four feet; including the rail, it would be about seven feet altogether. There were eight of us on board."
